Lojeri Productions offers three internship positions: Production, Marketing/Development and Office Administration. They are open to undergraduate and graduate students in media production, communications, journalism, business and the humanities. Internships are available for college credit and are open to recent graduates. The internship program provides students with practical experience in a small business setting. Former interns have been hired at ESPN, CBS-Connecticut WFSB Channel 3 and at the New York American Marketing Association. Your contribution will give more students a hands-on experience creating high quality film productions and gaining employable skills.

“Lojeri Productions gave me an opportunity to practice my post-production skills and also learn new ones. While editing documentaries I was involved in the whole process, from digitizing footage to making final edits.”

Gosia Grzesiowska, Post-Graduate
Production Intern
Communications and e-Media,
Quinnipiac University

“I was encouraged to offer my ideas and opinions throughout the post production process, which really made me feel like I was part of a team. I walked away from Lojeri Productions with two production credits and a better understanding of how much time and effort is needed to create a professional video. I truly feel that without this internship I would not have been offered a great starting job.”

Lindsay Schwabe, Production Intern
Cinema Studies, University of Hartford

“Interning at Lojeri Productions provided a stepping stone to go on and achieve greater things. The hands-on experience allowed me to work independently and use other talents to build my resume and make a valuable contribution to the company. I was able to learn concepts by applying my textbook knowledge to better understand the link between theory and practice.”

Lisann Campbell, Marketing/Development Intern
Marketing and Advertising,
University of Hartford
